Group at Lowe-Moore Wedding, Which Took Place at the Summer Home of Major General Franklin J. Bell in the Philippines.

There has not been one labeled as a real, genuine blow-in-the-bottle leap-year match, and yet it is supposed that the most maidenly of maidens should not blush to offer herself to the man of her choice in leap year.

Now is it a fact that it is just as good form to ask a man as it is to wait to be asked? If so, why are girls, who are in no wise averse to angling for a man, so afraid someone will know that they really proposed to him? Why should a girl hesitate to tell a man how fond she is of him, when in countless ways she lets even the veriest stranger read the fact in her every action? Is leap year to be taken as nothing but a joke, anyway, or is it to be a very real opportunity for the girl who knows what she wants in the way of a husband, and seeing, goes after him?

The military post is enlivened these days by the presence of an unusual number of attractive young women visitors, and despite the fact that the various companies have been ordered out on hikes at sundry and various times recently, the place has seemed more like an army post in its main characteristics on this account. From a rather quiet place socially, the post has developed a rushing whirl of social events, dinners, teas and informal evening affairs, filling every hour. The newest arrivals among the visitors are Miss Elizabeth Hardaway of Cincinnati, sister of Mrs. Philip G. Wrightson, and Miss Nettie Snow of Wellesley, who are guests at the Wrightson home. Miss Alice Brees of San Francisco is with Captain and Mrs. Frederick G. Kelland; Miss Polly Young of New York is visiting Captain and Mrs. C. C. Smith; Miss Margaret Daniel of Los Angeles is a most attractive young girl who is a guest of Colonel and Mrs. Irons; Miss Brown of Laramie, a sister of Mrs. Coburn, is the guest of Captain and Mrs. Coburn; Miss Alice Palmer, sister of Lieutenant Palmer, is the guest of Lieutenant and Mrs. Harry Jordan. Besides these, Miss Cartwright, sister of Mrs. W. B. Graham, has been with Captain and Mrs. Graham since their arrival here. Even among younger girls the post is particularly happy in having a number, among them the attractive twin daughters of Colonel and Mrs. Burham, who are home from school for the summer.

Miss Genevieve Hoffman and Miss Dorothy Harker.

Afternoon tea has really become an institution of itself in San Francisco, and the really smart ones could hardly go through the entire afternoon without dropping into one of the downtown cafes and having something which shall be dignified by the term of "tea." Not that elegant or uncolored Japan or English breakfast beverages are any more popular there than elsewhere. But there are so many things which may be classed as "tea" in the afternoon, and which by a judicious system of synecdoche, or hyperbole, or metaphor, or something, are made to answer the purpose. Take it at the popular "tap room," which was originally designed as a tapestry room, but which owing to the absence of the tapestries and the presence of—shall we say tea—has become well known the length and breadth of at least the western country, as the "tap room." Everyone goes into the tap room for tea, and yet who ever dreamed of having a real teapot brought into the "tap room"? But the fact remains that tea, or its equivalent, is really a social institution in "Frisco."

A letter from Tien Tsin brings the news that the Jones family—Colonel and Mrs. Frank B. Jones and their two charming daughters, who were at Fort Douglas for the few months prior to the departure of the fifteenth, are delightfully established there, and together with many of the army folk popular here for the past few years, are enjoying life in China. Among those with them are Major and Mrs. James M. Arrasmith, Lieutenant and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles Sampson, Captain and Mrs. Conrad, Lieutenant and Mrs. F. M. Miller, Lieutenant and Mrs. Hugh Walhall, Captain Garrison McCaskey and others of the popular Fifteenth.

Miss Editha Jane McCaskey, from Rochelle, Ill., a cousin of Miss Gladys McCaskey, whom the latter visited last fall and early winter, is to be added to the already numerous attractions of the post. Miss McCaskey will reach here today, and already a great many social affairs have been planned in her honor.

A most interesting picture is that of the wedding of Miss Mattie May Lowe and Lieutenant Walter Moore shown on this page, an account of which event was published last week. Aside from the central figures, the bride and bridegroom, it is interesting to Salt Lake friends as a likeness of Lieutenants E. B. Garey and Ned M. Green and also of Miss Garey, who was a visitor here. If good luck goes with the bride, she will reach here today, and old shoes thrown after newlyweds there must have been considerable in the large-sized footgear Mr. Garey is evidently preparing to hurl after the bridal pair.

The band concerts of the post have proved popular in the past few weeks since they have changed to the evening hour. Many parties of friends have gone up for the early evening either by motor or on the cars to spend an hour visiting with friends and enjoying the delights of the music. The concerts are given on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 8 o'clock and are open-air affairs which are attended by the general public. A special concert is given Sunday morning.

Miss Rose Evans entertained a few of the closest friends of Miss Josephine Weil yesterday morning at a morning bridge party with a luncheon following at the Evans home on Third East street. The table was decked with pink sweet peas. The guests to meet Miss Weil were Miss Isabel Shiffer, Miss Bryan Houston, Miss Frances Cowan, Miss McCaskey, Miss Dorothy Rookledge, Miss Genevieve Savage and Miss Denise Karriek.

Miss Ruby Koerber entertained a party of young people last evening at bridge at her home in honor of Mrs. Lyman R. Martineau, Jr. The lawn surrounding the house was lighted with Japanese lanterns and the card tables were arranged on the lawn. Later a supper was served indoors at which the hostess was assisted by Mrs. Koerber and Miss Daisy Raybould.

Fitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fitch, to Frederick Johnson, formerly of New York. The marriage will be one of the events of the early autumn. Miss Fitch was a great social favorite during her residence in the city. She has spent the past year or so abroad, but the family home at present is in Eureka.
